The stressors in the world can become too much for many. Mental health has an impact on an individual's overall well-being, productivity, and workplace dynamics. In recent years, there has been several emerging trends in workers' compensation claims related to stress as a loss driver.

CHWCA recognizes there is a growing need to address mental health in the context of workers' compensation and risk control.

This session will provide information on the impact of mental stress to the CHWCA Program. Information on recognizing stress and navigating the management of your staff during stressful situations will be the focus of this session.
